Case Study: MIC Bar, London

www.micentre.com

Outline

Entertainment and small meeting facilities were added to the reception atrium to meet the needs of lunchtime, business and early evening clientele. The space now complements existing conference facilities by providing a venue for pre and post conference networking, sports events or informal breakout groups.

Challenges

Careful consideration needed to be given to potential conflict of audio between different uses and venue ambience. The clean lines of the atrium required visual impact of technology to be minimal or complimentary. Transparent roof sound reflection needed to be accounted for in assessing room acoustics.

Technical

Two 40" LCD screens provide access to breaking news and feature sport events and include local laptop input plus swing arm brackets for discrete group presentations. Background audio is streamed from a CD player for consistent mood and selection of different playlists for events, meeting, lunches and evening. Eight sets of SONY wireless rechargeable headphones give access to individual TV soundtracks at user controllable volume, avoid conflict with other clientele or groups
